PROJECT MANAGEMENT AND ROADMAP 2035: Leading the journey to net zero

28 OCTOBER 2021

As the need to protect the global climate intensifies, activities in the North Sea will undergo a transformational shift. OGUK's Roadmap 2035 initiative sets out the priorities for achieving a "Blueprint for Net Zero". Given the urgency, effective project management and leadership will be needed like never before and our conference will consider how project professionals can influence and facilitate the change that will be required to meet the challenges in the following key areas:

- Developing People and Skills
- Driving Technology and Innovation
- Growing the Economy and Exports
- Helping Meet UK Energy Needs
- Supporting Net-Zero

The ECITB's 2021 project management conference will examine how the disciplines of project management can help drive success in each area. Aimed at project practitioners and a wide range of other stakeholders, delegates will be encouraged to take on board the practical ways that the profession can help to accomplish these goals. Attendees will not only hear about the challenges and needs, but also be part of the conversation by contributing their thoughts and experiences to the panels and plenary sessions that will take place.

As well as highlighting how we can adapt our project resources, experience and skills, case studies of projects already underway will be shared, so that the lessons being learned can be imparted. Contributors both from within and out with the oil and gas industry will emphasise how experience can be gained from other sectors.

A project management exhibition will run alongside the conference sessions.
